guardian.co.uk, Monday 29 June 2009 15:13 BST

Since the disputed president election on 12 June, the Iranian authorities have detained hundreds of opposition supporters, journalists and protesters. There have also been a number of deaths.

Left are the dead and detained. These are the cases identified in news reports or by human rights and campaign groups such as Reporters Without Borders, the International Campaign for Human Rights in Iran and Human Rights Watch. But this list is not comprehensive. There are thought to be many more.

Where we have a picture we have used it. However, our information is incomplete. If you have a picture of any one of these individuals or information we do not have please click below.

Iran's dead and detained detailed

Two men were today hanged in Iran, the first known execution of opposition activists since the June 2009 election. Neither appeared to be connected to the post-election protests. At least one, Arash Rahmanipour, was already in jail, according to his lawyer. The other, Mohammad Reza Ali Zamani, was the first to be sentenced to death in the mass trials that followed the disputed vote, according to Amnesty.

According to the Iranian authorities, at least nine other people are currently on death row in Iran after being sentenced to death in similar post-election trials.

Thousands have been arrested in Iran since the election and many are still held in jail, some tortured or thought to be at risk of torture.

Human rights and campaign groups such as Human Rights Watch, the Campaign for Human Rights in Iran and Reporters Without Borders have been collecting and publishing the names of those dead or detained.

We have brought those lists, and reports from trusted media sources, into a database that we are asking readers and those elsewhere on the internet to contribute too.

Since we launched this exercise we have had hundreds of emails, photographs and names sent to us. Keep them coming.

All information is assessed before publication and we will be both visualising as an interactive graphic and making it available as a spreadsheet. Click on the link below to get the spreadsheet, which includes dates and sources for the information.
